

Dear Expectant Mother,

Thank you for taking the time to read our letter - hopefully it will give you an idea of who we are. We are firm believers that life is filled with endless possibilities and that you can be whoever you want to be. Life is too short to shove yourself in one category and we want to instill that in our children. We definitely don't fit into any one category; we farm, garden, are Star Trek/Sci-fi fans, have board game nights with friends, camp, swim, fish, read, listen to a wide variety of music, and travel occasionally. We try to do things that are hands-on and interactive because quality time as a family is important, and we want our child to experience as many things as possible to help them grow, learn and decide what they want in life.

We have been together for almost 6 years and married 3 years and have talked about having kids from the start but we wanted to make sure Rick was done with school and our life was stable before adding children. Now Rick is a nurse, William works in a candy factory, and we love our life in the country, our families and our animals. The only thing missing is children. We have a wonderful support system of family and friends to help us along the way. Rick's best friend growing up was adopted, William's brother has an adopted daughter, and he has cousins that were adopted. Our family treats everyone the same and you would never guess any of them were adopted unless they told you. Any child we would be fortunate enough to adopt would be treated the same and showered with love. William has a large family that all live fairly close and lots of cousins for our children to grow up with.

We live in a rural community on a small farm in the country. We raise horses, chickens, goats, rabbits, ducks, geese, peacocks, quail, a bunch of barn cats and one house cat. We love to garden and raise as much of our own food as we can. Our horses play a big part in our lives and our family's lives. We go trail riding and take the horses camping in a national forest with William's parents along with some of our friends at least once a year. We can't wait to teach our kids how to ride and hope they love it as much as we do.

We hope we have given you enough information to interest you in finding out more about us and possibly provide us with the opportunity to be parents. We can't even begin to know what you are feeling or going through and don't want to give to you the same speech you have probably read countless times already, so here are some final thoughts.

You have embarked on a journey that has led you here and hopefully we are a right fit in the things you want for your child. We are prepared to be involved as little or as much as you want us to be during the pregnancy and are open to keeping you updated on the child as he or she progresses through life. We will love your child whole heartedly and try to provide as many opportunities for them as possible. We do want to thank you again for taking the time to read our profile and if you choose us we will be forever grateful for giving us the one thing we can't have on our own, a child to love.

Sincerely,

Rick and William
