

Xác & Amber

“Your greatest contribution may not be something you do but someone you raise.”

We always knew we wanted to be parents. We started off as high school sweethearts, and even long before we were married, we talked about our desire to be parents one day. We knew that being a mom and a dad would be our greatest and most important undertaking, so when we were told that we may never have children, we were devastated. Despite this shocking news, we knew we were meant to be someone's parents even if we didn't create and birth the children ourselves. Adoption was an easy choice for us! We are now happily building our family through adoption and living out our dream of raising children. Parenting has definitely been our most fulfilling adventure yet!

Our names are Xác and Amber, and our parenting adventure started when we adopted our son, Khai, in 2017. He has brought us more joy and happiness than we ever knew possible! He was the answer to many years of prayer and longing. Our lives look so different now than it did when we first married over 8 years ago. We are currently enjoying investing all of ourselves into ensuring Khai has an amazing childhood, filled with happy memories, meaningful traditions, and a confidence that he is and always will be unconditionally loved by us. We are blessed to have an open adoption with our son's birth mother. We text regularly, we mail her pictures and letter updates along with little gifts for special occasions and holidays throughout the year, and she likes to send us cards and pictures of her family, too. We have been putting everything she mails us in a keepsake box for our son to look through anytime he wants. We hope to have a similar open adoption with our next child.

We are a unique family. Xác immigrated here from Vietnam as a child, and although Amber comes from a small town American family, she also speaks and reads Vietnamese, cooks Vietnamese foods, and knows Vietnamese traditions/culture very well. We stay in touch with our family in Vietnam and cannot wait to bring our children there to meet the rest of the family! We plan to raise our children bilingually and wish to expose them to both of our heritages as well as whatever their biological heritage is.

Nothing is more important to us than our faith. We are both practicing Catholics and attend a beautiful historic church in the city. We are very involved in our church community, which is where we've made many of our closest friends. Our church has lots of large families with children, and there are many families there who have adopted children.

You are probably wondering what everyday life is like in our family. Xác works as a police officer, and Amber is a stay-at-home mom. Xác's work schedule is always changing, which is great because it allows for flexibility so our family can go on fun weekday adventures together or even just spend extra time relaxing at home together. If you decide to meet us in person, you will see how fiercely we love each other and how much fun we have together. Our home is constantly filled with laughter and silliness, hugs and kisses, and you may even see us in playful masks or costumes, or crawling around on the floor with our son making different animal sounds as we try to create fun imaginative worlds in our living room.

Thanks for taking the time to learn about our family! We know deciding whether or not to place your baby for adoption and whom you may want to place this baby with is a huge decision. If you choose us to parent your child, we look forward to staying in touch with you through letters, photos, and texts if that's something you're interested in. Khai is excited to be a big brother, and we know he is going to play that role well. When he joined our family, our hearts swelled with love, and we know that we have so much more love to give to another child. We have been praying for you, that God would show you the right family to place your baby with, and that He would fill you with peace in your decision. May God bless you as you seek to figure out what is right for you and your baby.

Sincerely,
Xác & Amber

Xác enjoys woodworking, gardening, fishing, hunting, and sports.

Amber enjoys cooking/baking, decorating, reading, and coming up with fun crafts and activities for our son.

Together, we enjoy spending time outdoors, hiking, picnicking, going on long family walks or bike rides with our dog, and playing in the backyard with our son. We love attending local fairs and festivals, visiting local attractions like the zoo and botanical gardens, and trying new foods and restaurants. We also like to travel. We're always searching for new places to see and experience!
